Unit 1, Grammar, exercise 6

Can you imagine going to a school like Hogwarts?

In many ways, Hogwarts, in the Harry Potter books, is a normal boarding school. A typical day starts with breakfast in the Great Hall. Then a bell rings and the students go to class. They have two classes before lunch, and two more classes in the afternoon. They even do homework and exams, and they get grades for their work.

But students don't study normal subjects, they learn about magic. And Harry doesn't play football, he plays quidditch.

You probably think that schools like Hogwarts don't exist but there is a real-life wizardry school in California. It teaches students all about magic!
